

Biography and Megaskills

Elizabeth the First

By Jessie

I read about Queen Elizabeth the First. She lived a really long time ago and was queen for a long time, too. I was surprised when she had Mary's head cut off. It was interesting to know Queen Elizabeth had a ruby as big as a tennis ball. I think it was interesting she did not get married. I think it was good to make a speech to cheer her troops on in war with Spain. I think it was good that she was not afraid when she became Queen. Queen Elizabeth showed many megaskills. Here are the ones I think are most important.

Problem-solving is when she had her cousin Mary's head cut off because she couldn't trust her. Her cousin wanted to be queen, too. She also showed problem solving when she had her other cousin Norfolk's head cut off. She also showed problem solving when she stopped the people from fighting about religion.

She showed responsibility when she ruled the country. She showed responsibility when she stopped some people from putting her friend in prison. She showed responsibility when she took care of England and made sure it was safe.

She showed caring when she thought that her people were her children. She showed caring when she went all around England to see her people. She showed caring when she wanted peace.

She showed motivation when she wanted to be Queen. She showed motivation when she wanted to shoot a bow and arrow. She showed motivation when she learned religion and five languages.

Reading about Queen Elizabeth the First taught me that when you show perseverance you don't give up, you keep trying. You get better at the things you don't give up at like Elizabeth did when she did not give up. She kept being Queen. When she learned to shoot a bow and arrow, she did not give up. She kept trying and she learned it. I was surprised that Elizabeth did not like to sew, but she did like to shoot a bow and arrow. I learned to persevere. I will persevere more in sports.
